Spiritual Disciplines Guide

Week of May 14, 2023

In our sermon series, Leadership Profiles -- the Kings of Judah, we continue our reading this week looking at three more kings in succession of David's royal line. Jehoram, the son of Jehoshaphat, in spite of his father's good influence, turns out to be a bad king. He married the daughter of the wicked King Ahab and follows in the ways of the Kings of the northern kingdom, Israel. His rule is cut short by God after just eight years in office. No surprise, Jehoram's son, the next king of Judah, likewise follows in the wicked ways of his grandfather Ahab. His mother (Ahab's daughter) became "his undoing", as we are told in chapter 22. He is eventually murdered by Jehu. The only surviving son, Joash, becomes the next king of Judah and, thanks to the godly influence of the high priest Jehoida, he became a good king and instituted positive changes in Judah, including repairing the temple of Jerusalem. Unfortunately, the reforms do not last and Joash ends his reign in defeat and disrepute. Wounded in battle, he is killed by one of his own officials. 2 Kings 11-12 gives a second look and overview of the life of Joash.
