Bible Reading 2021
Chart the Course
Old Testament
Week of July 25, 2021

We will complete the book of Job this week. Job's three friends are finished with their arguments when a fourth friend, Elihu, takes the stage. His discourse is longer than the other three (six chapters) with no rebuttal given by Job. Many believe that Elihu's advice is more akin to God's position and therefore he is not rebuked by God at the end of the book as the other three are. Again, note the "humanity" in Elihu's address -- suffering is real and it is the most difficult of our human experiences. God's nature does not change however, and he remains righteous and just, in spite of all our human doubts, struggles and frailties.

Note carefully God's response to Job in chapters 38-41. God answers none of Job's questions. In fact, he asks Job a long series of questions. Why? And how might this help us in our struggle with suffering on earth? The book leaves us where we began, knowing that we are human and will struggle in our human predicament. But also that God is divine, sovereign over all, and that righteousness and truth will eventually win the day.
