Spiritual Disciplines Guide

Week of August 13, 2023

In part two of Ecclesiastes, we continue on in King Solomon's search for significance. Written as Hebrew poetry, he is asking the question, "What is worth doing?" "Where can I find purpose, meaning and fulfillment in life?" So far he has investigated several avenues including the pursuit of pleasure, increased learning and knowledge, accomplishments and great projects, none of which have proved to be ultimately meaningful. The second half of Ecclesiastes is more of the same. Solomon will hone in on the shortness of our time on earth and the ultimate necessity of fearing God and keeping his commandments. One can consider himself fortunate if, in the process of life, he finds an enduring sense of happiness and satisfaction. However, the reality is that much of life is toilsome, troubling and wearisome. Like chasing after the wind, our own human efforts will inevitably come up short unless we find meaning and fulfillment in God.
