Spiritual Disciplines Guide

Week of August 27, 2023

We are back in the book of Psalms this week continuing to ask David's overriding question -- "How can I be saved from my dilemma?" In our readings we are singling out some of David's lament (complaint) Psalms and noticing the pattern of his prayers. Typically he begins by acknowledging his bad circumstances. In them, he rightly turns to God and asks in essence "Where are you in all this God?" "Won't you rescue me from this present danger?" At some point in the psalm, David shifts his focus from himself and his circumstances to God and God's greatness. He reminds himself just who God is and just what God can do on his behalf. This shift of focus tends to change the demeanor of the psalm from one of despair and defeat to a positive, victorious tone. Watch for this basic pattern as you read this week. No doubt, God wants to teach us through David's example how to come to him in tough situations and ultimately find, as David terms it, refuge, strength and deliverance!
