Spiritual Disciplines Guide

Week of October 2, 2022

This week, we find ourselves “midstream” in the book of Proverbs. Continue to take note of Solomon’s various descriptions of what wisdom is and what wisdom does. Solomon plays heavily on the chord of cause and effect. While we’d like to be dogmatic and suggest that every situation is absolute, most of the Proverbs are actually general principles of life with possible exceptions. For example, *Proverbs 11:28* “Whoever trusts in riches will fall, the the righteous will thrive like a green leaf”. The principle of sowing and reaping is certainly true, but there are times in this life where a “righteous” person may fail and a wicked one succeed. Nonetheless, Proverbs helps us single out right and wrong (wise and foolish) ways of living with general corresponding consequences. Read each day’s chapter pensively, noting ways these principles apply to your own life circumstances. Again, with each day’s reading, try to highlight one verse or principle that you can both take to heart and commit to memory. According to Solomon, your diligence will pay off! (*Proverbs 14:23*)
