Bible Reading 2021
Chart the Course
Old Testament
Week of November 7, 2021

This week we jump right into the heart of Jeremiah's message -- return to God or face exile. Typically each chapter is its own sermon. Notice the sentence spacing. Prose parts are full sentences where poetic sections are indented. Almost every chapter is a combination of both. Again, the chapters are a mix of doomsday predictions, calls to repentance, promises of future restoration and even personal prayers of Jeremiah amidst the fray and rigor of ministry. Occasionally God also gives Jeremiah parts to act out as a kind of visual aid to the people. (Note chapters 13, 16, 18,19.) Chapter 25 from this week's reading is a significant prediction of the length of the Babylonian captivity. Daniel refers to Jeremiah's prediction in Daniel chapter 9. There is hope in Jeremiah's words if you look for it. Scattered throughout the book are specific references to the coming Messiah (Savior) and God's ultimate plan to redeem both Israel and the world (Jeremiah 23:5-6).
