Old Testament
Week of December 5, 2021

One of the prevalent analogies or metaphors for unfaithful Israel in Ezekiel's day is prostitution. A prostitute was typically a married woman who left her husband in search of other lovers, either by lust or for profit. God's people, Old Testament Israel, was said to be betrothed to God. Time and time again, they laid their love and devotion to God aside in order to go after other lovers (gods). Ezekiel hammers this reality hard in these middle chapters of his book. God, in describing Israel as a prostitute, is suggesting that they received what every knew was a prostitute's punishment, death! Figuratively speaking, the nation died when they were taken into captivity due to their disobedience, idolatry and spiritual adultery.

Beginning in chapter 25, Ezekiel next announces judgement upon Israel's neighboring nations for their own list of sins, exaggerations and crimes. Included in his declarations are Ammon, Moab, Edom, Philistia, Tyre and Egypt. Notable in this section is a double prophecy in Chapter 28 where God refers to both the pride of Tyre and the pride of Satan as under judgement and the reason for their coming fall and destruction. Ezekiel 28 is alluded to in both Isaiah 14 and Revelation 12-13.
