Bible Reading 2021
Chart the Course
Old Testament
Week of July 11, 2021

We are picking up steam in Hebrew Poetry, reading the books of Job and Psalms. In Job, notice the three friends who've come to console Job. Their intentions were good, but most of their consolation involves prodding Job to discover what wrong thing he has done to warrant God's punishment. Job is stymied and frustrated with them, to say the least! We know from chapters 1-2 that Job was blameless and upright and that his suffering is not the direct consequence of sin, but rather a showdown of sorts between God and the devil.

The Psalms contain several types of songs. Some are straight Praise Psalms, some are called Lament Psalms, where the author complains to God over his circumstances and asks for relief. There are also a number of Messianic (prophetic) Psalms that point to the future Messiah's reign. Read pensively with a special emphasis on learning more of how to pray to God and praise him for who he is. The Psalms contain a wealth of learning about the nature of God. They deserve your careful attention.
