New Testament

Week of August 28, 2022

This week we find ourselves “midstream” through the book of Revelation. Having seen the seals and trumpet judgements, we are now introduced to two mysterious witnesses who testify in Jerusalem for three and a half years before they are put to death and then miraculously resurrected. Next we’ll meet a woman and a dragon, representing Israel and the devil. Chapter 13 gives a summary of the rise of the coming Antichrist together with a second beast, the false prophet. Notice their primary activity on earth and the impact it will have on the church. Chapter 14 acts as a kind of parentheses in the action with a vision of heaven and the 144,000 redeemed. From heaven three angels descend to earth to proclaim the gospel and give final warnings to earth’s population. Earth is now ripe for the coming harvest of lives, both the righteous and those destined for wrath. Friday will find us gearing up for the seven final plagues that will come upon the earth.

Plenty to think about this week. The overriding consolation we draw from Revelation, in spite of all the figurative language and mysterious events, is that God is sovereign over history and that he will bring about his intended ends, which include judgement and punishment of wickedness and final glory for his faithful people.
