Spiritual Disciplines Guide

Week of September 18, 2022

Having finished our consecutive reading through the New Testament, we will now revert back to one Old Testament book which highlights our need for godly wisdom. This fall, our sermon series will cover several controversial social issues as well as some of the current attacks on Christianity and the church. We need godly wisdom. Proverbs was written by ancient King Solomon, who sought God for wisdom to rule over Israel. In his book, he writes down some 300 short proverbs (sayings) which summarize what wisdom is and what wisdom does. As you read, you will notice that Solomon uses comparisons (note the word “like”) and contrasts (note the word “but”) to illustrate his points about wisdom and wise living. Take your time reading each day's scripture. Look for relevant passages that apply to your present life circumstances. You may want to copy certain verses and commit them to memory. There's a blessing that comes not just in reading the Bible and acknowledging its veracity, but also in selecting passages that highlight God's character or enhance your own life and then committing them to memory. James 1:25 says there is a special blessing for us if we do just that! Why not start with some of the passages of the Proverbs of King Solomon?
