

Bible Reading 2021

Chart the Course

Old Testament

Week of September 5, 2021

During the next three weeks we will finish reading the book of Psalms, the longest book in the Bible. This fall, then, we will work our way through the last section of the Old Testament -- The Prophets.

Remember, the book of Psalms contains several types of songs -- praise psalms, complaint or lament psalms, historic psalms, royal psalms and messianic (prophetic) psalms. This week's reading contains some of the better known praise psalms. Read pensively each day's chapters, noting how the author relates to God under his own specific circumstances. Note any verses that apply directly to you and your life at this time. Notice also ways that you can expand both your knowledge of who God is and your ability to praise him through each specific psalm. Let the author's words serve as a prayer for you personally at any point that you are compelled to agree with his sentiment. Consider memorizing specific verses that speak to you and your life circumstances personally. God's word is powerful and active (Hebrews 4:12).
